BOOK AND HEART.

For many a year he grubbed among
The stalls where antique tomes lie piled,
And then alone when, for a song,
He bought some prize, he ever smiled.
Staring at titles, oft his eyes
Slanted aloft with eager looks,
As if he stood in paradise
'Neath trees of knowledge hung with books

So long the reflex dull of calf,
Morocco, vellum, lit his face;
That it is leathern now by half,
And Time's deep tooling we can trace.
Volumes grew human in his care,
While he their form and semblance took,
Till men stood on the shelving there
And in the armchair lolled a book.

But books and men will fray and fade
As Care's rude finger turns the page,
Or in some sunless chamber laid
They warp and mildew into age.
The living leaves grow scar and wan,
The back knows many an ache and crook,
Till into limbo's flung the man
And to the grave is borne the book.

Who knows; yon pile of ragged leaves
May, when some critic finds it there,
Be gathered up like golden sheaves
And garbed in beauty past compare.
E'en so, if aught of worth he find
Between its margins broad and white,
Some heavenly Grolier yet may bind
The bookman's soul in covers bright!
—George Seibel in Critic.

ABOUT A MINX.

How She Shocked the People of Lindenthorpe.

Miss Betty Mayne had been back in Lindenthorpe for a week, and for a week Lindenthorpe had been shocked Miss Mayne felt hurt. When she returned, she had been homesick for the sea and the seaboard folks, left behind when her aunt carried her up to town years before, and friendliness was in her heart toward them. Instead of receiving the same, she had been met with envy and jealousy and all uncharitableness. Partly is was her fault, partly theirs. They only remembered her as the imp and scapegoat of the village, who played on the rocks all day long with bare feet, and they resented her grown up fashionability. She could not help realizing that she was better dressed, knew more of the world and was in many ways a hundred years ahead of Lindenthorpe. Then, again, Mr. Silas Attenborough, who always did the right thing, and whose actions, accordingly, were viewed with an indulgent eye, had seemed in danger of doing the wrong thing. "Moonstruck," Miss Griggs declared him to be. And the minx was not even flattered.

It was on Sunday that the shock of shocks occurred. To begin with, several minutes after service had begun Miss Betty Mayne walked in—almost strolled in—as cool as a cucumber, and clad in the most outrageously fine dress, and stood in the entrance (instead of modestly finding herself a seat), poking away at the stones with a green parasol until Mr. Attenborough, who was churchwarden—the youngest churchwarden Lindenthorpe had ever had—rose in his Sunday best to show her to a place.

People were more disgusted than surprised when Miss Mayne, after fanning herself ostentatiously for some time, rose and stalked out of the church by the front door. Such behavior was to be expected from a minx. It was what followed that left Lindenthorpe resigned to anything short of an earthquake. Miss Mayne wandered down toward the beach in a pensive mood and took a seat on a bit of sandstone. She was a pretty sight in blue and gold, whatever Miss Griggs' opinion might be. A churchwarden is at liberty to differ from a Sunday school mistress on a question like this, and Mr. Silas Attenborough as he walked from church down to the sea and saw the minx on the rock differed in toto from Miss Griggs. He felt a desire to rebuke the minx for her conduct in church that morning, but was it wise to venture to the rocks? He was in his Sunday clothes and not very sure of foot among slippery weeds. Nevertheless, his sense of duty being strong, Mr. Attenborough crossed the Rubicon and at length reached the sandstone rock. The minx nodded to him. "I saw you in church this morning," she said.

"I zee you," said Mr. Attenborough gravely.

"It was very funny," she went on. "The very first thing I noticed was a chalk mark on your coat from leaning against the pillars, and I do believe you've got it on still."

This was hardly the conversation Mr. Attenborough had pictured to himself, and he rubbed the chalk away before replying.

"It seemed you left church avore t' sermon?"

"Dreadfully ventilated, isn't it?" she said, nodding. "I really wonder people don't get suffocated sometimes."

"It were a powerful sermon."

"Short ones always are, I think. Or did you come after me before it was finished?"

"Come after"— Mr. Attenborough was taken aback. He had hurried certainly, but he hardly expected the minx to notice that.

"Coom after avore t' sermon was finished?" He recovered himself indignantly. "I shouldn't think of't. But"—

"You didn't expect to see me here?"

Since the minx sat on a rock in full view of the shore, Mr. Attenborough evaded what seemed a fruitless question.

"It's agreeable by t' sea here avore dinner," he remarked.

"The same as ever," she said—"all Lindenthorpe's the same as ever—the sea, and the village, and the folks. They might have slept and never waked since the day I left, seven years ago. Oh"—she roused herself to sudden animation—"but I'd like to shock them!"

"Shock 'em!" said Mr. Attenborough, aghast.

"Shock you all, because I detest people who can be shocked, and if I knew for certain that I detested Lindenthorpe I'd be content to leave it and never see it again." She sank back against the rock.

"Would yew now?" said Mr. Attenborough, astonished.

She nodded. "It's quite true," she said.

"I don't think I'm easy to shock," he said guardedly.

"You?" She shook with laughter. "You? Why, you were shocked in church this morning. You'd be shocked if I were to push you into that pool. You're shocked now at hearing me suggest such a thing."

"T' church is different," remarked he, hastily edging from the pool. "But out of t' church I'm not easy to shock."

"You think so?"

"Solemn trewth," said Mr. Attenborough decidedly.

"Perhaps you're right," she said. "But"—she pointed a finger toward the shore—"is that Miss Griggs over there?"

He followed the direction of her finger and saw that most of the congregation were assembled in groups about the shore.

"'Tis, indeed!" he groaned. "An Miss Griffin an t' whole Sunday school watching us. I think that we shud be getting back."

"Don't let me keep you," she said.

"It is not keeping me. 'Tis only"—He looked about him for an excuse. "Zip me! T' sea"—

"What do you mean?"

"T' sea!" said Mr. Attenborough. "It's coom up"—

She sprang to her feet in great indignation:

"This comes of your talking. Why couldn't you keep your eyes open—what is to be done?"

"Could yew wade?" suggested Mr. Attenborough apologetically. He knew nothing of the rocks and what depths cut him off from the shore. Only he remembered that in old days the imp of the village knew every inch—

"Wade? In my best things?" Her scornful tone made him feel more at fault than ever.

"P'raps they'll send us a boat," he said.

"After we're drowned?"

"P'raps I could—take yew over to t' shore?"

"See how deep it is first," she said imperiously.

He let himself down gingerly and the water closed over the knees of his best trousers.

"Think yew would loike to be carried?" he asked dolefully, stretching out his arms for her to hurry. But she kept him there while she struggled to hide her laughter, and then said threateningly:

"If you drop me, I shall never forgive you"—

"And if I doan't drop yew?" said he.

"Lindenthorpe never will."

"Coom!" he said. And at that she let him take her in into his arms. The folk of Lindenthorpe on the beach were taking much interest in the proceedings. "The minx!" said Miss George. "Did you ever?" The churchwarden was splashing through pools of water, regardless of his appearance, and only careful to protect the affected burden in his arms. Most of Lindenthorpe was assembled on the shingle when he reached the uninvaded sand. Miss Betty Mayne made no motion of descent.

"Shall I set yew doon here?" he asked.

"No," she said: "it's damp; I should wet my shoes. Carry me right up to the shingle."

He breathed hard, not because of her weight, which was nothing, but because of the publicity of the thing.

"Whom be I carrying?" he asked. "Be I carrying ma sweetheart?"

"If—you will," she said, stormed by his unexpected boldness. He put her down in the middle of the assembled folk, some of whom feigned to be watching the sea. Miss Griggs happened to be the nearest, and she shook her head archly at the churchwarden.

"I'm shocked," she said. "We're all shocked, Mr. Attenborough."

"Are yew?" said he. "I'm—I'm sweethearted."—King.

The Nurse.

The care of the sick can scarcely reach its highest ideal save where personal attachment supplements knowledge and skill. Therefore, it belongs to the life of every woman. There are few households indeed where any girl can grow up without some opportunities for this experience. Such opportunities may well be supplemented by lectures, courses of reading and well planned demonstrations. If every woman could (as she should) under ordinary circumstances undertake the care of the sick in her own home, this would but accentuate the value and raise the status of the "born nurses," who, never happy save in the special exercise of their gift, would then quite suffice for hospital cases and the grand occasions of major operations. The sight of the rap and veil of the hired trained nurse when imported into a household with women members scarcely raises one's idea of the family morale!—Chambers' Journal.

Terse and Gentle.

Most editors have their own special method of declining contributions, but for a terse and pointed rebuke we have heard of nothing better than the letter lately received by a well known author. As a rule, his stories are wholly unobjectionable, but in this particular case he gave himself a little more license than usual and produced a story which, though quite moral, was not altogether suitable for family reading. He sent it to a magazine editor with whom he was on friendly terms, and the manuscript was promptly returned with the following note:

My Dear Sir—Oh, my dear sir! Yours faithfully, ——.

—Westminster Budget.

Confucius.

Confucius calls himself a transmitter only, not a maker, believing in and loving the ancients. When speaking of himself, he says: "At 15 I had my mind bent on learning; at 30 I stood firm; at 40 I had no doubts; at 50 I knew the decrees of heaven; at 60 my ear was an obedient organ for the reception of truth; at 70 I could follow what my heart desired without transgressing what was right."

Confucius died in 478 B. C., complaining that among all the princes of the empire there was not one who had adopted his principles, not one who would obey his lessons. This shows—what is, in fact, confirmed from other sources—that he himself was not an active reformer, so that while alive he scarcely produced a ripple on the smooth and silent surface of the religious thought of his own country. He was, no doubt, in advance of his contemporaries, but he took his stand chiefly on certain verities that had come down to him from ancient times, and his faith in these verities and in their coming revival has certainly not been belied by what happened after his death.

His grandson already speaks of him as the ideal of a sage, as a sage is the ideal of all humanity. But even this grandson was far from claiming divine honors for his grandsire, though he certainly seems to exalt his wisdom and virtue beyond the limits of human nature.—Max Muller in Nineteenth Century.

The Payment He Asked.

Mme. Meissonier, the wife of the noted French artist, evidently was not overabundantly supplied with tact. It is told of her that one day she sent for the family physician, and he hurried over to the house, thinking some illness had overtaken the artist. It was not the master of the house, however. It was only the lapdog. The doctor pocketed his pride and most zealously attended the patient, which soon recovered. At the end of the year he sent in his bill, but among the items there was none for attendance on a dog. Mme. Meissonier noticed the omission and called the physician's attention to it.

"You must charge for that also," she said. "I insist upon it."

"By no means," was the reply. "I am not a veterinary surgeon. I was very glad to the dog a service, but really I can't be paid for it."

"But I insist upon it!" said the lady.

"Well, then," returned the doctor, "as the hinges on my gate are somewhat rusty M. Meissonier may bring his brush and paint them for me."

But Meissonier in the role of a gate painter is not known to history.

The Highest Art.

The word "artistic" has been so misapplied that the majority of people suppose it means something rather disorderly and haphazard. How often literature gives us the prim, precise maiden aunt, with her narrow, intense love of exact outline, and the art loving niece, all on fire with raptures over "color harmonies" and contempt for everything which is not picturesque! Let us give our sympathy, however, to the derided aunt. Craze for color is a lower degree of the sense of beauty than appreciation of symmetrical arrangement. Sculpture is a finer achievement of the intellect than painting. Savages and ignorant children can take pleasure in color display, but only an educated mind is moved through effects of form.—Florence Hull Winterburn in Woman's Home Companion.

Everybody's proud of this sort of Grandpa, and he's proud of himself; proud of his clear brain and active body. There are other kinds of grandparents that we can't be proud of. Weak of body and feeble of mind, we can only pity them. They no more live; they only exist. What makes the difference between these two classes of old men? A sound stomach and a plentiful supply of pure, rich blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, and increases the activity of the blood-making glands. It won't make old men young, but it will enable old men to assimilate the food they eat, and so strengthen them for a life of reasonable exertion.

"I suffered for six years with constipation and indigestion, during which time I employed several physicians, but they could not reach my case," writes Mr. G. Popplewell, of Eureka Springs, Carroll Co., Ark. "I felt that there was no help for me; could not retain food on my stomach; had vertigo and would fall helpless to the floor. Two years ago I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and little 'Pellets,' and improved from the start. After taking twelve bottles of the 'Discovery' I was able to do light work, and have been improving ever since. I am now in good health for one of my age—60 years. I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's medicines."

Old people often need a laxative medicine. The best for them is Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

A PRINTER on an exchange, in making up the forms one day in a hurry, got a marriage notice and a grocer's advertisement mixed up so that the combination read as follows: "Mr. John Smith and Miss Ida Johnson, were united in the bonds of good old sauerkraut, which will be sold cheap by the quart or barrel. Mr. Smith is a highly esteemed codfish at eleven cents a pound and the charming bride has delicate pig's feet at one cent each."

BACKWARD turn backward, O Time in your flight, and make me a kid again just for to-night; with the freckles and warts we possessed long ago, and the dear little stone-bruise that grew on each toe. Give back my old kite with dog fennel tail; for the kind I now fly always land me in jail. Back to the river once more let meroam till gloaming arrives; and, when I get home, take me out to the woodshed and there let me dance, to the tune father played on the seat of my pants.—Exchange.

"WHAT are you doing?" asked one of his friends who had happened in. "I am writing my resignation," replied the professor of something or other in the proprietary university. "What are you doing that for?" "Because I am going to make a speech this evening in which I shall probably express an independent opinion."—The Chicago Tribune

RARELY.—The statement is sent out from Lincoln that Editor Bryan has refused a $10,000 soap ad. for The Commoner, as if that were something remarkable. As a matter of fact, weekly papers rarely accept $10.000 soap ads.—The Kansas City Journal.

THE report that the Queen's death was hastened by interviews with Lord Roberts, Lord Salisbury, and Mr. Chamberlain, in which she extracted some unwelcome truths about the state of affairs in South Africa finds wide belief, and William T. Stead, in a cable dispatch to the New York Journal, says: "The Boer war has killed the Queen." The Irish World (New York), on the other hand, hold that "Victoria was lacking in imagination as well as devoid of that sort of sympathy which makes its possessor share in the sorrows of others." for, it says, "if she had possessed those two qualities her heart would have been wrung with anguish by the terrible sufferings of millions in India and Ireland during the famines which have periodically swept over those countries." It goes on:

"A woman gifted with imagination and sympathy might, if in her place, have done something for Ireland and saved British rule in that land from the heinous crimes that have made it a hiss and a byword throughout the world. When she succeeded her uncle, William IV., the population of Ireland was over eight millions; to day it is something over four millions. One half the population swept away by famine and emigration. Such is the record that Irishmen and Irishmen's sons can not forget as Queen Victoria decends into her grave."

A Minister's Mistake.

A city minister was recently handed a notice to be read from his pulpit. Accompanying it was a clipping from a newspaper bearing upon the matter. The clergyman started to read the extract and found that it began: "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." This was hardly what he expected and, after a moment's hesitation, he turned it over, and found on the other side the matter intended for the reading.

THE OBSERVER.

Position of Great Britain.

The Springfield Republican says, in a thoughtful comment: "Two events of world-wide significance, and of immense import to Britain, occurred in the last half of the nineteenth century. One was the American Civil War in 1861 65, which confirmed and sealed forever the national unity of the American republic; the other was the war between France and Prussia in 1870-71, which unified modern Germany. Those two events ended the era when Britain was practically without competition in industrial and commercial supremacy, for they brought to the front the two great powers of the present time whose extraordinary material energy is now regarded by all thoughtful Englishmen as the gravest menace existing to British predominance in the world's commerce and finance. It is apparent that the last thirty years of Victoria's reign really witnessed a steady decline in the international potency of Britain as a financial and industrial power; while in diplomacy and war her former prestige has been gradually dimmed by the formidable territorial growth of Russia through the arts of diplomacy, by the creation of the modern continental armies, and by the large increase in the naval strength of the other maritime powers. This important fact of the relative decline of Britain since 1870 must be understood in considering the future of the empire now that the Queen is gone.

"Politically, Victoria leaves her empire with three weak point — Ireland, India, and South Africa—while the entire network of so scattered a dominion depends upon the maintenance of the most powerful navy afloat. Now it ought to be clear that an empire that depends for its solidarity upon its perpetual control of the sea by means of warships has a precarious prop to rest upon. In this respect, Britain is inferior to powers so compact and yet so huge territorially as the United States and Russia, whose destiny can never be decided by one or a dozen naval fights. Britain's position is just this: The power that controls a stronger navy holds the British empire as a mere pawn in the international game. The melancholy isolation of Britain adds an element of danger to her future, for it can not be forgotten that her greatest successes in the past have sprung from the coalitions she was able to organize and finance, while her severest reverse, the loss of the American colonies, resulted from a coalition against her.

"It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the nation can never be more puissant, compared with other powers, than during the memorable reign now ended. The Victorian age will probably de distinguished in history as marking the culmination of Britain's greatness."

Madame Sarah Bernhardt Monday at Chicago insured her life for $100,000, and despite the fact that she is fifty seven years of age, the company believes that it has taken a good risk.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Consumption

is destruction of lung by a growing germ, precisely as moldy cheese is destruction of cheese by a growing germ.

If you kill the germ, you stop the consumption. You can or can't, according to when you begin.

Take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil: take a little at first.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

It acts as a food; it is the easiest food. Seems not to be food; makes you hungry; eating is comfortable. You grow stronger. Take more; not too much; enough is as much as you like and agrees with you. Satisfy hunger with usual food; whatever you like and agrees with you.

When you are strong again, have recovered your strength---the germs are dead; you have killed them.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

The star of empire takes its way westward, it is said, and so does progress of all kinds, including that in agriculture. Even the errors that are habitual in a particular section in one decade become the habit of a section farther west in the next. The soil robber began his work with the landing of the pilgrims on the Atlantic coast in all probability, and he and his descendants moved a little farther west each year, repeating his thefts upon nature as he went, leaving those who came after him to bear the burden of his dishonest treatment of the soil. We realize this as we see laws for the analysis and regulation of the trade in commercial fertilizers gradually creeping west. Every few years sees the legislature of some new state, where commercial fertilizers were only a short time before practically unknown, passing laws in regard to them because their use and the necessity of it was gradually creeping in.

Agriculture is conducted at a great disadvantage when the conditions become such that commercial fertilizers are necessary, and in the west, if western farmers will but heed the experiences of those farther east, the use of commercial fertilizers can, by proper management, be postponed indefinitely. If a farm is rich in fertility, the fact should not relieve its owner from the necessity of keeping it so. If the farm seems to be growing poorer, it affords a good reason why its owner should reform his management and bring the land up and make it richer. It can be done without resort to any of the "ates" and "ashes" that are sold on the market. The means for doing it are intelligent cultivation, well devised rotations and the keeping of live stock to the full capacity of the farm, together with the intelligent and economical use of the resultant manure and the growing of leguminous crops in rotation.

Every man's situation and circumstances present a problem that is, in some respects at least, a special one. How a particular farm can best be improved in fertility is a subject requiring special investigation and study by the person most interested—namely, the owner. But, concludes Iowa Homestead, the general fact is true that by the means above suggested the fertility of every farm can be maintained and improved, and the way fertilizer laws are creeping westward indicates that for the farmers of those localities that have not yet been reached by them there is no more important problem than that of maintaining fertility, so that the necessity for these fertilizer laws may never arise in his own state.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 21, 1901.

To the Residents of Marin, Sonoma, Mendocino and Lake Counties:

This company will issue for the year 1901, a new edition of "Vacation."

We shall be pleased to receive for insertion therein the names of those who did not have last year, but who intend to take summer boarders this coming season. Please advise us in your letter, location, distance from station, means of conveyance, amusements, special points of interest, charge for board, number can be accommodated, postoffice address, etc.

Almost without exception, those whom we advertised in last year's "Vacation" had a very satisfactory season and have signified their desire to continue. There are many more living on ranches or in the towns who can accommodate visitors from outside points.

Please write us as requested above, prior to February 10th, so that we may advertise you in our "Vacation" for 1901. We make no charge for this advertising—you furnish the accommodations, we will try and furnish the people.

FOR MALARIA, CHILLS AND FEVER.

The Best Prescription Is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic.

The Formula Is Plainly Printed on Every Bottle, So That the People May Know Just What They Are Taking.

Imitators do not advertise their formula knowing that you would not buy their medicine if you knew what it contained. Grove's contains Iron and Quinine put up in correct proportions and is in a Tasteless form. The Iron acts as a tonic while the Quinine drives the malaria out of the system. Any reliable druggist will tell you that Grove's is the Original and that all other so-called "Tasteless" chill tonics are imitations. An analysis of other chill tonics shows that Grove's is superior to all others in every respect. You are not experimenting when you take Grove's—its superiority and excellence having long been established. Grove's is the only Chill Cure sold throughout the entire malarial sections of the United States. No Cure, No Pay. Price, 50c.

LAST SEASON'S VINTAGE.

Wines of 1900 Rich, Strong and Full-Blooded.

The Gundlach-Bundschu Company Comments on Viticulture in General.

The Gundlach Wine Company of San Francisco, whose vineyards are located on Rhinefarm near this place, have issued the following circular letter to the wine trade and patrons of California vineyard products:

We take pleasure in commenting as usual on the general result of the last year's vintage. While in Europe abundance and superior quality inspire the hearty gratifications of the vintners in the Medoc and Rhine districts, we have to be satisfied in California with rather moderate results. The yield generally can only be considered a little better than half a crop with such local exceptions where special conditions produce a more favorable showing Thirteen to fourteen million gallons of dry wines and seven to eight million gallons of sweet and fortified wines may constitute a conservative estimate of the entire vintage. On account of the high value of grapes ($16 to $20 per ton) brandy-making was neglected and the output will be considerably behind last year. Sonoma county leads distinctively this year in the production of dry wines; more than one half of the entire yield of dry wines emanates from this glorious fertile section of our State, while Santa Clara (formerly the banner county for red wine) has succumbed to the influences of drought and phylloxera, and is on record with only 2½ million gallons. Excessive heat and lack of moisture necessitated an unusual early season; sugar developed rapidly—rising in some parts above 30 degrees, and it required all the skill of experienced winemakers to control obstinate fermentation. Some sweetish and refractory cellars are the result. As a whole, the wines of 1900 will be known as a rich, strong and full bodied product, slowly maturing and developing into a rare, superior product of massive excellence.

Considering the situation of California vineyard products generally at the present time, we wish to emphasize that a spirit of unparalleled vigor has apparently stimulated the close of the century. It can hardly be claimed, that this ultimate change for the better is simply reflexive and in harmony with the progress and industrial development of our country at large; favorable conditions have already existed in other branches for several years and still our industry languished and could not be lifted into a hopeful channel of prosperity. Several moments of grave importance have gradually influenced conditions in California. First—the exceeding shortage of the last two vintages (both of them together yielding less than the aggregate of the crop of 1897); next—The progress of the destructive influences of phylloxera in the vineyards of Santa Clara and other counties where some of the great estates are actually inclining towards ruin and decay. It will take many years to re-establish on resistant roots everything like the state of high cultivation, still existing only five years ago. On the other side—our shipments for export and for home consumption are proportionally increasing and our old stocks have been alarming on the decrease.

Therefore it should be no surprise to anyone familiar with the past history of viticulture in California—with its many vicissitudes and unsatisfactory results, leading the most hopeful and the most enterprising of our vineyardists during the last forty years into a condition of disappointment and bankruptcy—, if the powers, that rule to-day in viticulture under the inflexible principle of the survival of the fittest, are wide-a-wake to grasp the situation and to demand, that after years of despondency and loss the situation for the next few years must be turned towards recuperation and for the natural benefit of vineyardists, winemakers and distributors in California. Self-protection demanded vigorous action and no one will blame the investors of many millions of dollars in the wine and brandy industry, if they now in a measure may insist on adequate returns. To the detriment of our products, they have been sold most of the time below their actual value and although we personally disapprove of too much centralization and are not in favor of exclusive control without competition, we are inclined to believe in a spirit of judicious co-operation and in an abolishment of systems that heretofore produced fatal results.

We believe in fair (not extravagant) prices for grapes—sufficient to uphold the industry; we believe in a careful selection of superior qualities—the fostering of special brands in wood and glass and the encouragement of the production of specialties of the highest type and character. The manufacturing of bulk wines in large quantities must necessarily interfere with the discriminating care so essential in the handling of fine grapes; still—some of our growers and vintners will never depart from the true principles that built up the fame of the leading wine countries in the world; we certainly will not. We will continue to concentrate our efforts in the direction of producing, selecting and maturing the finest and worthiest products of our State.

RESIDENT PHYSICIAN.

Dr. Davis Secures a Position at the Home.

Dr. H. H. Davis of this place has been appointed by the Board of Directors of the California Home at Eldridge, resident physician of the institution. He will enter upon the discharge of his duties on March 1st.

The position will bring him a salary of $150 per month and will necessitate his taking up his residence in the big institution of which Dr. A. E. Osborne is the Superintendent.

Dr. Davis has been a practicing physician in this place for nearly seventeen years and is at present a member of the Board of City Trustees. He will resign this latter position and will also turn over his private practice in this valley to another physician before entering upon his duties at the Home.

BURGLARIZED.

Bellevue Hotel at El Verano Enterad by Thieves.

Thieves effected an entrance into the Bellevue Hotel, El Verano, at an early hour last Saturday morning and rifled the till of a small sum of money and a silver watch. They also helped themselves to a quantity of whisky and cigars.

On Saturday afternoon Constable Ohm and Deputy Constable Lounibos arrested Joe Boulogne and Emile Gegand, two strangers in this place, on suspicion of having a hand in the burglary. On them was found a skeleton key and a quantity of cigars. The men were placed in the lock-up to await a preliminary examination before Judge Cheney.

Monday Assistant District Attorney Berry arrrived in town to prosecute the suspects, who were arraigned before Judge Cheney in the afternoon. The evidence being deemed insufficient to obtain a conviction, the Assistant District Attorney very properly moved that they be discharged from custody. The men were thereupon turned loose and left town. They are supposed to be old offenders.

L. ENFELD DEAD.

The Stroke of Paralysis Proved Fatal.

Louis Enfeld, who was found lying helpless alongside the road near the Catholic Cemetery, Thursday night of last week, as narrated in these columns, died about ten o'clock the following night. Enfeld, when discovered, was paralyzed from his shoulders down and after being removed to the City Hotel it was seen that his case was hopeless.

His family, being in destitute circumstances, the necessary funds to defray the funeral expenses were donated by the generous people of this valley within a short time after his death.

The funeral took place from St. Francis' Church Sunday and was quite largely attended.

The remains were interred in the Catholic Cemetery.

In Justice Court.

Sonoma's high court was in session last Thursday afternoon, Chief Justice Cheney presiding, and counselors Emmet Seawell and Joseph P. Berry of Santa Rosa at the bar. The action was of a criminal nature, the defendant, Chestino Guidotti, being charged with having inflicted a severe scalp wound on Frank Ferroggiaro with a knife. The case was the outcome of a "scrap" between the plaintiff and defendant in the El Verano saloon. The arrest was made shortly after the termination of the bout and Guidotti was lodged in jail, where he remained until Wednesday morning, when L. Quartaroli and A. Pinelli were secured as bondsmen in the sum of five hundred dollars.

The case was tried without a jury and resulted in a dismissal.

Mrs. A. Hope, accompanied by her daughter Claire, went over to Stony Point last Monday for a few weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Woodworth.

While walking on Market street in San Francisco Saturday, Horace Camm of Petaluma found checks amounting to $1,700. He returned them to the owner and received a dollar for his trouble.

Miss Eda Gillan has gone to San Francisco to attend the funeral of her friend, Miss Jennie Anderson, who died in San Francisco Wednesday. Miss Anderson was visiting here last November.

Wm. Monahan was a passenger on the north-bound California Northwestern train Sunday.

Jep Valente was up from San Francisco Sunday and spent the day with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Valente.

Mrs. Pauline McMullen, after spending several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Gage of Santa Rosa, has returned home.

The little two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Porter, (nee Bertie Sydner), died Wednesday of last week.

W. G. Corbaley, at one time Superintendent of the Donahue railroad and a resident of Glen Ellen, is lying seriously ill in San Francisco.

Judge James Hayden of San Rafael spent a few days last week at Sacramento visiting the Legislature and noting the workings thereof. He was dined and wined in royal style and says "those fellows are all right to get next to."

The safe of the Sotoyome Hotel at Healdsburg was opened and $200 stolen last Saturday morning. A package containing $800 worth of jewelry was overlooked by the thief. No arrests have been made and it is probable that the culprit will never be apprehended.

Mrs. Benj. Weed and her sister, Mrs. Carl Dresel, have returned from San Francisco after attending the funeral of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Hopps, who died suddenly from the effects of spasms. Mrs. Hopps was before her marriage Miss Fraunholz and spent much of her time at Rhinefarm.

The axle of J. S. Blackburn's dead wagon broke while eight miles from Petaluma Sunday on its way to Glen Ellen. F. L. Blackburn left it at a ranch and finished his journey in a rancher's rig. The disabled wagon was taken back to Petaluma Monday.

Gone To a Better Land.

[Written by a Friend]

Mrs. R. G. Steele has passed to silence and pathetic dust. Life's slender cord, worn out by the continual activity of seventy-six years, has been severed and the spirit of a noble life winged its flight into the mystic realm of eternity. Mrs. Steele had been ill for several months, and when the dark curtain was rung down on the final act of her earthly existence she passed away as peacefully as in infancy she slept upon her mother's bosom.

Deceased was a woman of marked ability and her entire life was devoted to literary pursuits. For thirty years she was in the newspaper business in Merced county, and in the city of Merced she died at 7:30 o'clock last Thursday morning. In her prime Mrs. Steele wielded a versatile pen, and many of her articles, printed in leading publications, were considered literary gems. As a friend she was true blue, and in her the cardinal qualities of ideal womanhood were combined. "For justice all place a temple and all season summer" was her life's motto.

Deceased was the mother of H. H. Granice, proprietor of this paper, George Granice (deceased) and Lee Steele of Merced. She was a native of New York, but came to this State many years ago.

The funeral was held at Merced yesterday.

Now, as a last tribute to one who in life was noble, honest and true, let us hope that to her death did not bring oblivion's dreamless sleep, but brighter fields where she met in joy the loved ones that had gone before and will await in peace the loved ones that are left behind.

Pioneer at Rest.

At the advanced age of eighty-five years, Jacob G. Mayer passed peacefully away at his home near Vineburg station at 4:15 o'clock last Wednesday afternoon. Deceased was one of the oldest pioneers of Sonoma Valley and for many years his feeble form was a familiar figure to persons who passed by his humble home. A son, Jacob Mayer, Jr. still lives on the old homestead.

The funeral was conducted in San Francisco, interment being in Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

Sale of Tubbs' Island Steers.

A band of fine steers passed through here last Monday en route to Napa. They were raised on the Tubbs' Island ranch. Some were purchased by H. Weyl and the others by Evans and Zollner, the Napa butchers.

A Grewsome Discovery

Alfred Filipini, son of Charles Filipini, while riding on horseback over his father's stock range, between this place and Napa, last Wednesday morning, came suddenly upon a sight he will not soon forget. On the topmost point of the mountain, directly on the line of separation between Sonoma and Napa counties, he discovered the lifeless body of a man half covered with brush. Young Filipini immediately reported his grewsome experience and several people drove out from this place to the scene. It was found that the corpse was that of an unknown man and there was every indication of suicide. He had tied a small rope to the limb of an oak tree, then around his neck and leaped into the unfathomable depths of eternity. The body was in a decomposed state and had the appearance of having been dead at least two months. The rope with which the deed was committed had parted in the center and the remains of the unfortunate man dropped into the brush below.

Coroner Pierce was summoned and held an inquest, the following gentlemen composing the jury: G. S. Harris, R. A. McDonell, Jos. Toroni, Louis Breitenbach Jas. Law and Howard Munfrey. The verdict was in accordance with the facts as stated above; that the deceased was unknown and came to his death by hanging himself with suicidal intent.

The remains were interred in the potter's field in Valley Cemetery.

City Trustees.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the City Trustees was held last Wednesday night, a full Board being present. The meeting of the last minutes were approved as read.

The Board accepted an invitation from the Sonoma Volunteer Fire Company to be present at a banquet to be held in the near future.

A communication was received from L. Justi in reference to the assessment of the Sonoma House property, but no action was taken.

The committee appointed to buy a safe from Mr. Stueben, the jeweler, reported that they had made the purchase for sixty dollars.

The report of the Finance Committee on the City Clerk's report was adopted and placed on file.

The Clerk was instructed to notify the City Treasurer that it will be necessary for him to file a new bond in the sum of $2,500.

The following bills were allowed and ordered paid:

Robt. Hall, gravel, $10 00; R. McDonell, gravel, $7.00; Geo. Bulotti, oiling and packing hydrants, $3.50; Jos. B. Small, salary and stamps, $25.25; J. K. Dyer, pruning trees, $25.00; Jas. H. Albertson, salary, $15.00; F. Harrison, electric light, $25.50.

Board of Supervisors.

At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors Monday afternoon, the office of County Farmer, which has been held for the past few years by John D. Cooper, was declared vacant, and John Wesley Wood, a young man of Glen Ellen, was elected as his successor at the same salary. The office of matron of the County Hospital was created and Mrs. J. W. Wood was elected to this position at a monthly salary of $20.

The matter of computing the claim of Sonoma county against the State for the maintenance of orphans for the year ending December 31st, 1900, was turned over to W. S. Coulter, who was employed as accountant for that purpose.

The following road bills, aggregating $1168.74 were allowed: Supervisor Blair Hart, of the First District—Agua Caliente road district, $92.35½; Glen Ellen, $117.97; Lakeville, $55.12½; Penngrove, $55.85; San Luis, $71.86½; total, $393.06½.

Supervisor Joseph A. McMinn, of the Fourth District—Cloverdale road district, $279.17½; Washington, $180.45; Knight's Valley; $316.05; total, $775.67½.

Spare the Robins.

Sonoma Cal. January 6th, 1901.

To the Editor:

I learn with pleasure that Constable Ohm placed a young hunter under arrest for a violation of the game law, which prohibits the killing of robins at any season of the year.

This young man had bagged eighteen birds and Judge Cheney had no alternative than to impose a fine of $20 on him.

Between you and I, that's about the right valuation. The advent of robins always indicate cold weather and a fruitful year. On the 22d of December they made their first appearance, this season, in Sonoma Valley, and have not yet taken their departure.

Probably you can see in my orchard one thousand robins, busy all day long, at work. Surely they are the farmer's friend, and let me tell you, I am so well convinced of it, I would be willing to say to the Assessor, add one thousand dollars more to the valuation of my assessment—if he will only guarantee 1000 robins (at $1.00 each) next season to arrive in December and remain with me until the following February.

A Convincing Answer.

"I hobbled into Mr. Blackmon's drug store one evening," says Wesley Nelson of Hamilton, Ga., "and he asked me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism with which I had suffered for a long time. I told him I had no faith in any medicine as they all failed. He said: 'Well if Chamberlain's Pain Balm does not help you, you need not pay for it.' I took a bottle of it home and used it according to the directions and in one week I was cured, and have not since been troubled with rheumatism." Sold by F. Duhring. *

FARM AND GARDEN

NEW SPRAYING DEVICE.

Compressed Air Power Does Excellent Work With Bordeaux Mixture.

A new wrinkle in spraying with bordeaux mixture is the use of compressed air, which a Pennsylvania farmer describes in Rural New Yorker as follows: The first cut shows the manner of charging the air tanks, while the second shows the machine in operation. The rig is perhaps a little expensive, but it does the work fast—just as fast as you wish to—and the hard work is a thing of the past. The entire outfit consists of a two horsepower gasoline engine, an air compressor mounted on a one horse wagon and two two wheeled carts carrying the air and mixture tanks. Each cart is supposed to carry two tanks of 50 to 100 gallons each. The photo shows three tanks. I had intended to use a small tank for air and have the initial pressure 200 pounds, but in practice I found it better to have more air space and lower pressure, so I added another tank. The two tanks are connected together by one-quarter inch gaspipe and shut off valve. Each tank has a steam gauge to show at all times the amount of pressure inside it. One tank has a hose connection with common union coupling to attach it to air compressor. The other tank has a large pipe connected at bottom. This pipe turns up behind the tank and terminates with a large valve—refilling valve. Near the turn of the large pipe is a tee connection having attached two lines of hose, as shown in the picture. Of course more lines can be connected if thought best. The energy is stored before commencing work, so the number of nozzles used has no bearing on the quality of the work done.

The carts are very simple affairs, homemade; two thills with three crosspieces all bolted together, with the tanks strap bolted to crosspieces. The first picture shows how the engine and air pump are mounted on a heavy one horse wagon so as to be easily moved to any point where it is most convenient to water to fill spray tank. Operation is as follows: One cart is backed up to the compressor, as shown in first picture. The hose is connected (about ten seconds' work) and engine started. The operator then takes a large wooden pail or tub with a short piece of pipe in bottom that fits the refilling valve, opens a little relief valve at top of spray tank and pours the mixture in. By the time the operator gets the mixture tank full the engine has got up a pressure of 125 pounds in the air tank and is ready to begin operations.

The machine is now ready for use, is disconnected from the compressor and driven to orchard. When ready to throw spray, the valve in small pipe connecting air to mixture tank is opened a little. In two or three seconds the gauge on mixture tank will show 50 or 60 pounds pressure. This is about the right pressure to throw a dense fog of spray. As long as nozzles are in use the little valve is left open slightly so that the pressure in the spray tank is constant at 50 or 60 pounds. If the nozzles are shut off for a minute or two or longer, it is closed so pressure will not go too high.

Now as to cost. For my purpose, all things considered, a gasoline engine seemed to be best. It cost $165, is two horsepower, weighs about 250 pounds. The barrel shown is half full of water, connected by pipes with water jacket of engine cylinder. The can upon the frame is the gasoline supply. I heat the hot tube with charcoal. That is the stuff I have found that will not blow out on a windy day. The air compressor cost $60. Engine runs 400 revolutions, size of pulley ten inch, belt three inch. With only 125 pounds maximum pressure and the fact that in changing the compressor stops no water jacket is really necessary, although I use a little water in the jacket.

The tanks can be had of any manufacturer of soda water or bottlers' supplies. They are known to the trade as "air tanks." They can be had in any size, are tested to 200 pounds or more, are not very heavy and cost last winter $15 each for 50 gallon tanks. Every one knows what nozzles, hose and connections cost. I used grape wagon wheels and axle for the carts. The framework costs possibly $5 for each.

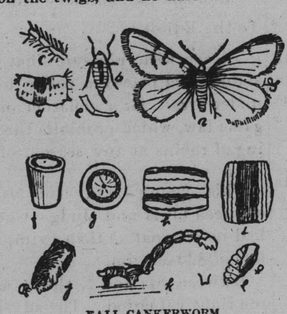

Just figure on the cost of a telephone line extending from your farm to town, talk it over with those along the line who would be glad to go in with you, and you will be surprised that you haven't had a phone long ago, says Farm Journal.

FALL CANKERWORM.

Its Life History and the Methods In Vogue For Fighting It.

Very destructive insects are the cankerworms. Though easy to conquer if properly treated, the annual loss due to their depredations is very considerable, and it would seem that many persons have yet to learn the methods of fighting this old time pest. There are two species of cankerworms more or less common wherever apples are raised, the fall cankerworm and the spring cankerworm. The fall worm is perhaps the more common. It is a single brooded insect, which lays its eggs either late in the autumn or early in spring. The egg hatches out a small loopworm that grows to the length of nearly an inch. It varies greatly in color, but is usually gray or almost black, striped with yellowish or greenish. Being a measuring worm, it has less than the ordinary number of legs, six true legs near the head and four false legs near the posterior extremity, with an extra rudimentary pair on the fifth abdominal segment. When full grown, it descends to the ground and usually buries itself sometimes several inches beneath the surface. Here it forms a cell by turning round and round and changes to the pupal stage. Late in the fall, from the last of October to the time when the ground becomes frozen, the adults emerge and lay their eggs on the branches of the trees. Many of the moths do not emerge in the fall, but remain in the ground till spring. When adult, the two sexes differ greatly in appearance. The male is a pretty moth, with ash gray front wings marked by three transverse darker lines and hind wings of silvery gray. The female, on the other hand, is not provided with wings, but has to crawl wherever she goes. She is somewhat more robust than the male and ashen gray in color marked with black.

The fact that the female cankerworms are wingless and must creep from the ground to the branches of the trees in order to lay their eggs gives us an excellent means of fighting them. If we can head them off and prevent them from crawling up the trunks of the trees, the eggs cannot be deposited on the twigs, and no harm will result.

FALL CANKERWORM.

A, male; b, female; c, d, e, structural details; f, g, egg enlarged; h, i, segments of body; j, patch of eggs; k, larva; l, pupa of female.

To accomplish this end various devices have been tried, such as banding the tree with paper and on this spreading printers' ink or caterpillar lime or any thing sticky enough to prevent the caterpillars from crawling up. Perhaps the best band is made of cotton batting. A strip of this is wound around a tree trunk and fastened securely by a string at or below the middle. The upper end is now turned down, forming a loose, fluffy mass, in which the insects get entangled and die. This method has one disadvantage. The bands have to be kept on from the last of October until spring is well advanced and must be renewed after rains or when the cotton loses its fluffy nature. As the worms feed upon apple, elm, cherry and some other trees precautions must be taken to prevent them from breeding on these trees and again infesting the fruit trees.

The best method of overcoming these pests, however, is by spraying. They readily yield to a spray of one of the arsenites (see chapter on insecticides), which should be applied early as soon as any worms are seen, even before blooming, but never during the period of bloom. It may be necessary to repeat the spraying, but this method is by far the cheapest and most satisfactory.

Notes and News.

It has been particularly noted at the Rhode Island station that where a greater amount of nitrate of soda has been applied annually to grass land sown with clover, red top and timothy a far greater proportion of the crop consisted of timothy than where less of it was applied or than where it was omitted.

The heads but not the stems of sunflowers are made into silage.

In growing onions in Bermuda the land is enriched with well rotted cow or pig manure. The seed is sown in September and the crop harvested from January to May. A rigid system of inspection covers all shipments to the United States.

This country has come to be without a peer in the manufacture or agricultural implements and machines both as to quality and number.

Under the recent act for the protection of game animals and birds among birds the most general prohibition is that against the shipment of quail. All but 12 of the states prohibit export of these birds. Among the exceptions are seven southern states, Montana and North Dakota, but in Montana the sale and in North Dakota the killing of quail are at present unlawful.

The approaching Argentina wheat harvest, which begins with December, will be watched with great interest, as it figures largely in the world's trade. Present talk is that it will be large. But this crop is an uncertainty till actually harvested.

The making of paper from native grasses is a new proposition.

A Few Pointers.

The recen statistics of the number of deaths show that the large majority die of consumption. This disease may commence with an apparently harmless cough which can be cured instantly by Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, which is guaranteed to cure and relieve all cases. Price 25c and 50c. For sale by all druggists.

MAYDOLE'S HAMMER.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

When Maydole was told that he made "a pretty good hammer," he said, "No, I don't make a 'pretty good hammer,' I make the best hammer that ever was made."

Every carpenter who saw a Maydole hammer wanted one. It was of the best material, perfectly balanced, and the head never flew off. Hammers were divided into two classes—1st, Maydole's; 2d, all the rest.

Plasters are separated by the same line of cleavage; 1st, Benson's Porous Plaster; 2d, all the rest. When, for rheumatic pain, a cold, a cough, kidney trouble or any other disease or ailment that may be treated externally, you ask for a plaster, any honest, reputable druggist will give you a Benson's. He knows it is incomparably the best, and he assumes that you know it too. As the name of Maydole stood for hammers the name of Benson stands for plasters—the "real thing." All the medicinal potencies that are valuable in a plaster are in Benson's. Capsicum, Strengthening and Belladonna plasters are out of date.

An army of physicians and druggists, and millions of the people, have written of Benson's Plasters as a remedy to be trusted.

Benson's Plasters have fifty-five highest awards. Accept no substitute.

For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States, on receipt of 25c. each.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in a drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by F. Duhring. *

At Bed Time

I take a pleasant herb drink, the next morning I feel bright and my complexion is better. My doctor says it acts gently on the stomach, liver and kidneys, and is a gentle laxative. It is made from herbs, and is prepared as easily as tea. It is called Lane's Medicine. All druggists sell it at 25cts and 50cts. Lane's family medicine moves the bowels each day. If you cannot get it send for a free sample. Address, Orator F. Woodward, Le Roy, N. Y.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by F. Duhring. *

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. A trial size will be mailed for 10 cents. All druggists sell the 50c. size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N.Y.

The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation.

With Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh and Hay Fever.

For You to Read

"What puzzled me in the beginning was that I kept losing flesh without any cause for it that I could see. I had a little trouble with my stomach, too, and after a while began to grow weaker and to cough. The cough, I thought, would soon go away and cure itself, but it didn't. It grew worse, and then I began to spit up a peculiar looking substance. I never thought of consumption, but one day I had a hemorrhage, and then was frightened in earnest and did just what you would do. I rushed to the doctor. He was either too busy, or something else, for he didn't do me any good. I kept going on down hill, and the outlook was bad. Things took a different turn, however, when I heard of Acker's English Remedy for Consumption, for I took it, and it not only cured my coughing and spitting, but also built up my whole system. I took on permanent flesh, and today am just as healthy a man as you can find in a week's travel. You may be sure I always keep Acker's English Remedy in the house, and it is a good thing I do so, for one night my youngest child was seized with croup. That hoarse, wheezy cough was the first signal, and I lost no time in giving the poor liitle sufferer proper doses of this grand medicine. In almost no time the disease was under control, and my child was saved. I advise every parent to have a bottle handy all the time. It serves the same purpose in keeping croup out of the house that a good lock and key serve to keep burglars out. It is both an expectorant and a tonic. It cured me of consumption and my child of croup, and I know what I am talking about." (Signed) Hon. M. HOGAN, picture frame manufacturer, 242 Center Street, New York.
